THE WORLD THIS WEEK

By ROBERT PATTERSON

The Western World

Troubled waters in Europe wash quickly against the shores on this side of the Atlantic, reducing four thousand miles of ocean to a little lake. Today the cannonading on the battlefields of France carries its echo into this hemisphere, bearing the warning that a quick Allied defeat may lead to uprisings by Nazi agents against governments in Latin America. The elaborate groundwork for such action has been carefully laid over a period of years. Persons who are neither alarmists nor hot heads venture to predict the likely use of American troops to occupy some western hemisphere islands and South American mainland possessions of European powers. The nation has recently restated its unswerving adherence to the policy of the Monroe Doctrine. If that clear-cut warning goes unheeded, the country has no alternative but to underline its policy with protective action.

Patriotism by Decree

It was no blow for liberty that the justice of the Supreme Court struck, in ruling that two children aged 10 and 12, must be forced to salute the flag in violation of their religious prinicples. Of the entire high court, which supposedly President Roosevelt made "progressive," only one justice held out valiantly in support of the constitutional guarantee of religious liberty—not a New Deal liberal, but a Republican appointed by Calvin Coolidge, Justice Harlan F. Stone. In a vigorous dissent, he charged the majority decision was a "surrender of the constitutional protection of the liberty of small minorities." Certainly the Supreme Court ruling has contributed nothing to the security of the country. Spies and fifth columnists, will—as ever—be most alert in saluting the flag and pledging allegiance to the country for which it stands. The true test of patriotism and devotion to this country is in deeds, not in lip service or formal rites. Thanks to last week's decision, America has been saved from the insidious wiles of two harmless school children, but the forces of Hitlerism are not one whit the worse for it.

One Cure For War

One of the country's largest industrial concerns has just come forth with the important news that it has developed a new synthetic rubber. Known as butyl, researchers assert that in the event of a national emergency it could be produced in any required amounts. While science has been too often branded with sole responsibility for the terrible destructiveness of modern warfare, its progress in the field of synthetic research may one day succeed in obliterating the economic causes of war. If all nations are one day able to produce their own rubber in unlimited amounts, the struggle for colonies and countries possessing natural rubber may become less intense. Scientists, in several

The death of Mr. Buck on Saturday came very unexpectedly, as he had been attending to business during the first few days of the week, although physicians had told him he should be abed.

Taken to the hospital Saturday morning he passed away that afternoon.

He was born in Keeler, Mich., receiving his education in that state. When he came to California he became a gardner, living at Pasadena. Later he moved to Campbell where he had resided for 25 years, continuing in agricultural work for some time, but later established a route in this section for the Consolidated Laundry company of San Jose, in whose employ he still was at the time of his death.

Rambo Home Scene of P.-T. A. Garden Party

The spacious gardens of Mrs. F. R. Rambo, Stevens Creek road, were a perfect setting for the delightful Rainbow Garden Party sponsored by the Campbell Union High and Grammar School P.-T. A.'s, Friday afternoon, June 7.

Tables were placed under beach umbrellas beside the swimming pool and on the patio. Cards and other games were enjoyed by many. Others wandered through the gardens enjoying the flowers and music.

During the afternoon, numbers were presented by the "barbershop quartet" of the boys' chorus and the girls' string ensemble of the orchestra, both from the high school.

The party was particularly momentus, because it marked the first use of the new card tables which have recently been purchased for the use of both units, the money having been raised by subscriptions from the merchants of Campbell and San Jose.

Campbell Wins Ball Tournament

An elimination tournament in baseball was held here Friday afternoon between the eighth grade teams of Campbell, Los Gatos and Moreland elementary schools.

The Campbell team was the winner with a score of 5 to 4 against Los Gatos in an eleven inning game and a 5 to 3 score against Moreland in a five inning game.

The local grammar school teams have played 20 games this season and won over three-quarters of them. There are four to five teams and each team plays four games, giving all the boys an opportunity to participate. Gus Standish is the coach.

Those playing in Friday's contests were Bill Nelson, c; Russell Sargent, p; Junior Dinapoli, 1b; James Crawley, 2b; Albert Texiera, 3b; Jack Libhart, bs; Douglas Strong, ss; Alfred Pregliasso, captain, lf; Clair Whiteman, cf; Joe Novakovich, rf.

Mrs. Margaret Boyer of Sacramento, has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Jessie A. Shelley for the past two weeks. Over last weekend she had also as house guests two nieces and their families, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Studt and son of Sacramento and Rev. and Mrs. Ned Graves from Hillsdale, Okla. He is pastor of the Christian church and she teaches in the high school.

Last Rites For Mrs. E. R. Smith This Afternoon

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock sorrowing relatives and friends, the ranks of the latter somewhat thinned with the passing of the years, gathered to pay final tribute to Mrs. Ellen R. Smith, who passed away at her home in North Second street Monday night.

The services, held at Rutherford funeral home, included the reading of a favorite psalm by the Rev. J. H. Bennett, and two songs, "Crossing the Bar," and "Lead Kindly Light," were beautifully sung by the pastor's son, Dennis. Private inurnment was at the Chapel of the Roses.

Mrs. Smith, who was 83 years of age, had lived in Campbell 40 years, coming here from Grinnel, Iowa, as the wife of Campbell's first high school principal, the late J. Fred Smith. She was a native of North Weare, N. H.

Until recent years, Mrs. Smith was very active in community affairs, lending valuable aid to the formation of the Campbell Library association, and the ultimate construction of the present building. She was a charter member of the Campbell Country Woman's club, and had served as its president for eight years. Long identified with the Congregational church here, she was a faithful worker and attendant there until failing health forced her into seclusion. Other activities included membership in the W. C. T. U. and in the California Indian association. Mrs. Smith maintained a real and deep interest in education, and always favored advancement in that field, at the same time clinging to the worthwhile traditions of the past. She was also deeply and intelligently interested in politics and the problems of government.

Campbell has lost a good citizen and a good neighbor; she must have passed away secure in the knowledge that she was leaving behind her a fine and useful family, the members of which are carrying on the works and ideals that meant so much to her for so many years. They are Mrs. Lillian Voge, Campbell librarian, Harold F. Smith of Nashville, Tenn., Stanley B. Smith of Los Gatos, Mrs. Dorothea Glass of San Fernanda and C. Gordon Smith of Palo Alto. Thirteen grandchildren and four great grandchildren also survive her. Another son, Stuart S. Smith passed away a few years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Irish arrived today from Redding for an overnight visit with their cousin, Mrs. H. C. Smith, before continuing their trip to Los Angeles and San Gabriel.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Clyde Glass of San Fernando arrived Tuesday to attend the funeral services for her mother, Mrs. Ellen R. Smith.

About 430 were issued to students and faculty.

The book has a light blue cover and has separate pictures of the faculty, the graduating seniors, the student body officers and the P.-T. A. officers.

The year book also contains pictures of the classes. It has sections devoted to athletics, snap shots and a large section containing literature written by the students during the school year.

"Fear," the short story was written by Billie Wasson. The poems include "Minnie the Mermaid," "Songs to be Sung," and "Jewels of the Morning" by James Rambo; "Tramp Dog" by Alice Mod-

Those who took part in the play were Wilma Porter, Bob Adamson, Mary Burgess, Vicla Coonradt, Loren Smith, Howard Stinson and Carl Arnold.

ry. A description sketch, "Ballroom after New Year's Eve," was written by Frank Savstrom.

Awards Given In Assembly Meeting

A student body meeting was held in the auditorium on June 11. The purpose of this meeting was to install new officers and to give honorary awards to students who had been outstanding in various activities throughout the year.

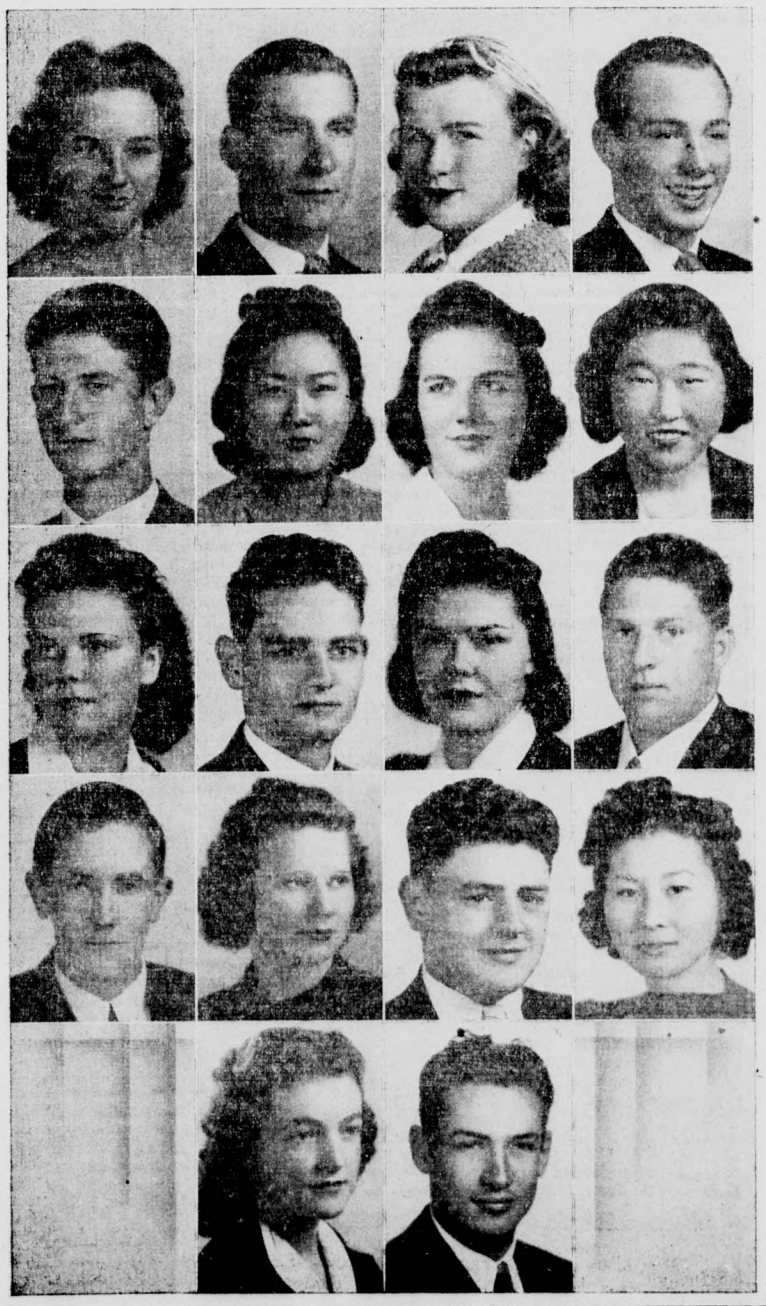

Tony Conetto sang "Desert Song," accompanied by Betty Bunda at the piano. Renso Orsi announced a C. Y. O. dance to be held Saturday.

Miss Ruby Howes gave block letters and stars to girls that earned 300 points or more in girls' athletics. This is the first year that large chenile blocks have been awarded to girls. AUTOGRAPH HUNTING IS SCHOOL FAD

Our annual "The Oriole" has been released to those who wish them.

The custodians work has been doubled this week, as they endeavor to keep the halls clear of autograph hunters who are constantly blocking traffic, making it impossible to pass.

"The Oriole" is bigger and better this year, with all the names printed in it, but the custom of having the book autographed is still kept up. The teachers are getting writers' cramps, and the senior officers wish they had never learned to spell their names.

Just think with 430 Orioles to sign, how can you sit down and get your breath. Many are asked to sign their names twice, which makes 860 signatures. At 30 seconds per signature it would take 430 minutes or seven (7) hours and ten (10) minutes steady writing. This would amount to one full school day with more than a full period to spare.

Choir Enjoys Picnic at Park

The a capella choir gave its annual picnic Wednesday, June 5 at Alum Rock park. The students pitched in to furnish refreshments, donating salads, cakes and relishes. C. P. Klassen gave the students a few pointers on barbecueing steaks.

Many students went swimming and hiking. Dancing concluded the evenings entertainment.

Seniors Give Class Program For Assembly

An enjoyable program was presented by the senior class for the entire student body Wednesday afternoon. Twelve numbers including thrilling plays and musical selections were on the program.

"Midnight Madness," directed by Miss Phyllis Copley, was a great success. A musical specialty, "Leaning On the Old Top Rail," a musical tableau, directed by Lorene Hoerner, proved to be as interesting as the title. The "German Band," led by Liberata Ruscigno, and directed by A. A. Thielke, provided some rather hilarious numbers. A "beauty parlor quartet," directed by Bertie Lee Farnham, gave delightful parodies of the famous "barbershop quartets." The "barbershop quartet," directed by C. P. Klassen and D. H. Cramer, included several musical numbers. "Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me," was sung by Bob Kittrell. The program also included several short skits and a baseball act.

Girls' Sports Season Ends

Girls' sports for this school year have come to an end. The scores for the different sports are as follows: In hockey the Blues won top honors with 13 points, the Reds, second with 10 points, the Golds third with 5 points. Bernice Robbins was manager.

In basketball the Reds took the lead with 290, Blues, 266, and Golds, 218 points. The manager was Emma Prestigiacomo.

In volleyball the Blues took the lead again with 742 points, Reds, 621 points and Golds, 584 points. The able manager was Jeanette Abbott.

In baseball the last of the sports played, the Reds again led the way with 82 points, Blues, 63, and Golds, 57. Hazel Silacci was the very busy manager.

The tennis ladder, up to date, for the singles, includes the following from top to bottom: Elaine Jeffers, Eloise Griffin, Jean Corning, Helen Wheeler, Barbara Broadbent, Mary Ono and Jane Gerrans. The ladder of the doubles is as follows: Abbott and Abbott, Sidensol and Nakagawa, Baird and Baltz, Baptist and Lester, Burgess and Blair, True and McCulloch, Herring and Lantz, Wingard and Hiatt. The manager was Lila Mae Baptist.

Girls' Leage Elects Officers

The Girls' League has elected the officers to represent the girls' activities for next year.

Bernice Robbins will take the place of this terms' president, Claire Lobrovich. Molly Cooley will be the new vice-president, and Roxanna Sidensol will act as secretary.

Campbell High Shows Well In Boys' Sports

Campbell high school boys have supported the athletic teams of the school very well this semester, making up teams to be reckoned with in each of the five sports that they entered.

The first sport during the semester was wrestling. This is the first year that Campbell has had a wrestling team. The ten boys who made up the team competed against teams from Santa Clara and Palo Alto. Two boys, Joe Marcel and Ray Pimentel, entered the San Jose high invitational meet where Marcel lost in the semi-finals and Pimentel won in the preliminary but lost in the final match. Wrestling will be continued next year and as the teams gain experience excellent records may be expected.

The 130 basketball team came out on top this semester, winning the championship, while the unlimiteds were tied for second place in the league.

The baseball team won but two games out of the six it played. A good team is expected for next year because of the large turn out of freshmen this year.

Track was well attended, with the 130's being the most successful. They took third place in the finals at Los Gatos. Four practice meets were held besides the finals.

The tennis team won three out of the seven matches that were played.

Class of 1939 Holds Reunion

The 1939 class from the Campbell Union high school held a class reunion Friday, June 7. A barbecue was held on the football turf after which the alumni went to the little theater to hear a dedication of the sign which the class donated to the school.

W. H. Van Dyke gave a speech of welcome to the returning class. All present gave an account of what they are now doing.

A dance was held in the little theater after the program. Robert Nickell planned the affair.

Seniors Give Gift to School

Every year it is customary for the senior class of Campbell high school to present a gift to the school. Last year the '39 class gave money to make a sign for the school.

The senior class of 1940 on Wednesday afternoon, in a ceremony, gave to the school library $40, which will be used to get new books. The class also donated at the same time $25 to the Red Cross of America.

TREASURE ISLAND CALLING

Through magic greater than man's marvels of radio and telephone, the glory of Treasure Island is calling all California across the ether of imagination—sounding the siren song of beauty, romance and fun.

The beauty of the Exposition is fresh in the memory of all who last year saw it aglow like a cluster of gigantic jewels in the night, or wandered through its horticultural and architectural fairyland by day. The romance of wonders, the art and culture of hoary civilizations and of modern America, is still there in profusion. And the fun features live up to the most extravagant predictions. There are new features—new name bands, the breath-taking acquacade of Billy Rose, added attractions all along the length of the now world-famous Gayway.

The call of Treasure Island is a joyous, wholesome, thrilling call, and the magic island makes good on every desire its siren song excites!

UNITED AMERICAN STATES

No longer in American eyes are the countries beyond the Rio Grande romantic manana lands where strumming guitars, dark-eyed senoritas, and deamy tangoes help spin the lazy hours away.

The Hollywooden picture of South America is fast fading before the stern reality of fast moving world events. Today the United States and the 21 Latin American republics share a common frontier in this western hemisphere. Congress, in special legislation, has just re-affirmed the principles implicit in the Monroe Doctrine in asserting this nation will not recognize or acquiesce in any attempt to transfer western hemisphere territory from one non-American power to another.

However, no matter what fateful events transpire in Europe, the future points toward the welding of increasingly stronger ties of friendship among New World nations. No more effective means of helping the people of the two Americas get acquainted in a direct and practical way could be proposed than the inter-American highway steadily drawing nearer completion. This country can testify from its own experience to the importance of far-flung highway systems in furthering travel, in facilitating commerce and trade through the means of motor transport which has broken through the barriers of once isolated regions. Certainly early completion of the inter-American Alaska - to - Argentina highway should prove equally valuable in bringing the people of the Americas closer together and strengthening the bonds of friendship and cooperation.

CALIFORNIA STILL LEADS

To some seven million persons, California is just home. To the rest of the country it remains the stellar attraction on all tourist routes. A national survey, just completed, finds California, Mexico, the West Indies and South America, winning the hearts and votes of vacation-bound Americans—in just that order. Let skeptics say what they will—California still has IT!

BELIEVE IT O RNOT!

Events loudly proclaim it—this is a world of change. But no one expected the processes of change would reach such an unbelievable height as that just announced by the Post Office department. During the first five months of 1940 it has amassed $14 million in NET PROFIT! Year in, year out, the proverbial Post Office deficit has been a steadfast mark. Across the sands of time, no matter how they shifted or eddied, its perennial deficit has ever been written large. And now all signs declare that even this stalwart monument to permanency is crumbling. It's a hectic world!

BOYS' and GIRLS' STATE

Through the week of June 22-29 an important step in government will take place in Sacramento: the annual Boys' State and Girls' State, when hundreds of California youths will meet to formulate their own model government, and learn by practice more of the functioning of American democracy.

No more worthwhile project has been undertaken by the American Legion than its sponsorship of this annual youth government, including the statewide series of essay contests and other educational programs by which the juvenile legislators are selected. Typical of many essays is that of the 14-year-old Patricia Hawkins, of El Monte high school, who wrote in part: "Already I feel the ideal Democracy lies within the shaping of my hands and those of other youth. I am an American. In America I am an individual. In America I am not afraid to laught. I can face my ambitions and desires with the faith that I will have an opportunity to contribute towards civilization's advancement. Cannot the mighty America ncreed be summed up in these simple words: Broadmindedness, Courage, Faith, I think so, and I am glad."

The fostering of such ideals and national faith among California boys and girls, the training and inspiration of their work in fashioning their own ideal government, cannot be considered less than an important step in government itself. For in a few short years those young people will become leaders in civic and state affairs. Their training for patriotic responsibility is a splendid investment in the California of tomorrow.

FATHERS' DAY

Surveying the fathers we know, it's our conclusion that the average, run-of-the-mill dad is well entitled to a day of his own. This year Father's Day falls on Sunday the 16th. The annual demands on the paternal purse has just passed its peak, with school expenses for graduation dresses, pins and presents, trousseaus and weddings for June brides, vacation budgets for the whole family—to say nothing of the June 15 instalment on the income tax! Because of those heavy drains, many quite ordinary dads forego the new golf clubs, fishing tackle, pipes or the books fathers like to have. And to dads like that, a surprise gifts or a bit of special attention from the family on Father's Day, or any day, is a heart warmer indeed.

Most men don't care much for the "Mother Machree" type of sentimentality that goes with Monther's Day—but you can bet that any father will appreciate a simple spoken: "Dad, you're a great guy, and I want you to know that I realize it." He may seem fussed and embarrassed and grunt something about "foolishness," but he will like it! Might remember that—on Father's Day.

CHAPTER XIV

Frank moved his own shoulder restlessly, groaned.

"Wouldn't you know the damn' thing—" he began mildly. He put his uninjured hand on his mother's bowed head. "How'd you hear of it, Mother?" he asked.

"Oh, Frank, that was so terrible! God grant we never have that to go through again! Pop saw it in the paper, but I got it over the telephone. It was the police, dear, from Newark. The man, said, 'Mr. Mc Cann has been slightly injured!' I thought of course it was Pop."

"That must have been hot!"

"It wasn't any better when I learned the truth, dear. Mamie had to take the phone. I got faint. They fixed me up on the sofa, and they tried to reach Papa; but they couldn't find him."

"I'm so sorry!" Frank said heavily. The look that was almost coma had come into his eyes again.

There were fewer persons in the room now. The younger brothers and sisters were being firmly ejected, one by one, by a powerful, big black-headed woman who was being cajoled by them under the name of "Diddy." They were imploring Diddy to allow them to remain, and Diddy was sternly refusing.

Mamie and two younger maids were running back and forth, in and out of a large, adjoining dressing-room, with sheets, tables, electric-light extensions. Someone had lighted a fire, someone else had drawn shades, someone was standing now with a tray and a steaming cup beside the bed, somebody else had ice in a bowl and was murmuring about "comprises."

An elderly woman, majestic and assured of demeanor, and identified as "Gramma," had established herself in a great wing chair, near enough to the bed for a clear view of all proceedings; Judge Mc Cann stood at the foot, his graying, black curly hair rumpled, his face grave and pale, his eyes for his son only. There were others beside Sheila and her mother; the big luxurious room was full of movement. The doctor, having finished a quick examination of her shoulder, drew Sheila toward the bed.

"No harm done here, Frank. She wrenched her shoulder and scratched one side of her face."

"Not broken?" Frank asked eagerly.

"Nothing broken."

"We're going now," Sheila, beside the bed, said timidly. "I hope they won't hurt you, Frank."

His eyes were beginning to burn brightly with fever; he caught at her hand. She looked shabby, tired, sick; there were great rings about her eyes; her lashes were stuck together in long points. Her hat had been lost in the crash, and her soft coppery hair was uncovered in the evening lamp-light. Frank remembered that she had not wanted to fly home; she had said she was afraid of it, and he had made her do it!

Remorse surged in his heart. There was something about this poor little luckless thing that had appealed to him in the very beginning of their acquaintance; it was stronger than ever now.

"I'm glad, if anything had to happen, it happened to me!" he said. "It was my fault, Mom, you mustn't blame this child. She's been—"

He tried to smile, but he was weak and in pain; the tears came instead.

"She's been wonderful," he said. "Down in Atlantic City, all this time. I knew it. Her own mother didn't know it. She's such a scary little thing, Pop; she didn't want to come home to face you all. I talked her into it." He looked up at her through misty eyes, managing a sickly smile. "We didn't know our adventure was going to end like this, did we, Sheila?" he said.

"We won't say that," Judge Mc Cann said. When she heard his voice Sheila's heart sank within her, for it sounded as if Frank might be dying—Frank might be dying—

"God knows me hear'rt's broke wit' the trouble me an' mine have brought on ye, sir!" Sheila's mother was saying, as they all went out into the hall. "But I know her—there isn't a bad bone in her body!"

"Mrs. Carscadden—" Mrs. Mc Cann said in a whisper. Her face was ghastly. "We knew nothing of this," she began again. "My son Frank has always been—we've depended on him!" she finished faintly.

"You mustn't break, Mamma!" the Judge said. But he looked broken himself.

"Is he so sick?" Sheila faltered, bursting into tears.

No one paid any attention to her. Judge Mc Cann, always grave and kindly, addressed Sheila's mother:

"Mrs. Carscadden, as soon as the boy is out of the woods I'll get in touch with you."

Sheila's mother appeared not to be listening.

"He said it. But I don't belave it!" she said, in a dull, stricken tone.

"Nor I, either," the Judge agreed. "There's some explanation—"

"No—no—no, he'd never do that!" Mrs. Mc Cann said in her soft, eager voice. "He never—they never thought—that was all!"

"Well, well, well," the Judge said, "we'll straighten it all out. God's ways are not our ways. And the young people today are not what we used to be!"

"Indeed, you're right about that!" said Sheila's mother.

They were working their way downstairs; Sheila and Joe, and their mother, and the senior Mc Canns, and various other unidentified persons, servants, cousins, aunts.

Among these Sheila had confusedly noticed, from the beginning, a pretty, black-eyed girl in a dark red suit trimmed with black fur, and a dark red hat. If she had tried to identify this girl at all she might have placed her as one of Frank's younger sisters; he had three besides Veronica, she knew, or she might have supposed her to be a concerned, pretty cousin. But as a matter of fact the group had been so large, and so mixed, and the babel of voices and the general movement so distracting, that Sheila, although she had distinctly observed this girl, had wasted no thought whatever upon her identity.

But now, in the lower hall, the girl suddenly took the center of the stage by arresting them all with a quick imperative word to the judge.

"Judge Mc Cann, and Mrs. Mc Cann, too," this girl began, in a high-strung and haughty voice. "I'm going. You'll understand—you'll understand, of course, that this changes everything."

"Oh, Bernadette, my dear!" Mrs. Mc Cann said, in a heartbroken tone.

"You must see that!" the girl said, in a quick, feverish manner. She stood close to Mrs. Mc Cann, her fingers nervously busy with her lace collar. "You see that?" she asked.

"Bernadette," the Judge said, "don't be too quick to judge him. We mustn't jump to conclusions. In a few days—when, God willing, he'll be better—"

"No, never!" the girl said with spirit. "Never! You heard what he said. He never saw me. He never spoke to me! It was—it was—"

She began to choke, flung up her head, was silent.

"Bernadette, dear," Mrs. Mc Cann said, her arm about her, "control yourself. I feel as bad as you do. It doesn't seem possible it's Frank. But let's give the poor child the benefit of the doubt."

"Doubt!" the girl echoed quickly, with a scornful laugh. "You heard what he said!"

"Bernadette," said Mrs. Mc Cann, "you know as well as I do that Frank Mc Cann is incapable of anything underhand—"

"Underhand!" The girl caught up the word again, angrily. "I don't know what you call it. Engaged to me, he was visiting this—this girl down there at Atlantic City! I don't care—I don't care whether he was living with her or not!" she rushed on recklessly, and the judge and his wife and Sheila's mother recoiled from the phrase as if from a blow. "That doesn't make any difference!" Bernadette Kennedy said, beginning to sob. "What difference does that make, as long as we know that he knew she was there, and was going down to see her—and her own mother didn't know where she was—and even the papers didn't know it—look at them!"

"Why, that's a lie!" Sheila said, understanding at least. "That's a lie! Frank never telephoned me in his life!"

"Oh!" breathed Mrs. Mc Cann, "this is terrible!"

"I wouldn't believe anything you said, if you swore it on the Gospels," Bernadette said, in a low, trembling tone, turning toward Sheila.

"I wouldn't care whether you believed me or not!" Sheila returned fiercely.

"You ruined Peter Mc Cann's life, and Gertrude Keane's life," Bernadette flung at her, breathlessly. "You might as well know it, you've ruined all our lives! While your mother and brother were worrying themselves to death about you, you and Frank—who's a hundred thousand times too good for you—you and Frank were down at Atlantic City! The papers no sooner get through with denying you're married to Peter Mc Cann than they have you in an airplane smash with Frank!"

"He may be dying, and you can talk about him like that!" Sheila said, her face ashen white. Her dress was still dusty and rumpled, her face dirty, and she had a deep purple bruise on one temple. But there was a flaming beauty—a force—in her aspect, as she faced the other girl, that made Bernadette draw back.

"Pretend that you love him, why don't you?" Bernadette said, in a frightened dogged voice.

"I don't have to! I thought you did!"

"Your kind always pretend that they love everyone," Bernadette said, in bitter contempt. "It's all love, and how a boy isn't understood at home, and things like that!"

"My kind!" Sheila echoed, with a bewildered look about the stricken circle.

"Yes, your kind! The kind that goes to a place like Atlantic City with a rich man's son!"

"Look here," Joe Carscadden said, suddenly taking a part in the conversation. "Look here, Miss What's-your-name. You be careful what you call my sister, will you, or you'll find yourself in trouble! Sheila isn't responsible to you for what she does—no, nor the newspapers, either!

"I've just been talking to her," Joe continued, warming at the sound of his own voice, "and she's been working hard in a hotel down there at Atlantic City, with no more idea that Frank Mc Cann knew where she was than—"

"Than the babe itself!" Mrs. Carscadden supplied, as he paused for breath, and for a smile.

"Joe, you believe me, don't you?" Sheila stammered, bursting into tears.

"I believe you," Joe said, angrily, "and I've had enough of these rich folks that pretend they want to help a girl, just because she's honest enough to return fifty dollars their daughter didn't even know she'd lost! I don't care if my father and yours were friends in Albany," Joe went on wildly, "I don't want my sister to have anything more to do with you!"

"Joe—Joe—" the judge began sorrowfully, placatingly. Joe shook off the friendly hand.

"I'll bid you all good day!" he said, heatedly. "Come on, Ma. Come on, Sheila!"

They went out, Sheila and her mother and brother, into the night.

"The way it was, Mamma—" Sheila began.

Helping her mother and Joe with the dishes, she was back in the home kitchen, back in an old faded gingham apron, with her bronzed hair tied up severely in a handkerchief. Sheila had returned from church, she had enjoyed once again the delights of a leisurely home breakfast with the family, and she was now retailing to them, for the hundredth time, some of the lesser details of her adventures.

Mrs. Carscadden now having finished the dishes, was at the sink, occasionally mopping its already well-mopped surface absently. Joe, really listening, was pretending to read the pages of the paper.

"Don't tell me how it was, Sheila," her mother said resignedly, "I can bear anything but that."

Sheila put her head down on the table and laughed.

"No one was iver good as you can make yourself out to be, whin ye've bust up two good engagements, and thrown a family like the Mc Canns into grief and sorrow!" Mrs. Carscadden observed.

"It may not be your fault," her mother continued oracularly, "but there's few cud get thimselves mixed up in trouble the way you do an' kape such an innocent face on you. Whativer you'd be doin' to get into one of thim Zeppelins I don't know, an' that you'd come down near Newark, New Jersey, is no more than you deser'rved! A little befoor that," Mrs. Carscadden continued, in a droning, resigned sort of monotone, "it was disappeared you were, an' no one had spache or sight of ye for days. An' befoor that again, it was merried in Boston, Massachusetts, ye were, by a justice of the peace, or was it a disthrict attorney, Joe?"

"It was neither, Ma," Joe said, and Sheila laughed again. She was not deeply concerned; she was thinking of something else this morning.

IN MEMORIAM
HARRY C. SMITH
June 15, 1937

A MAN'S PRAYER

Let me live, O Mighty Master,
Such a life as man should know,
Testing triumph and disaster,
Joy—and not too much of woe.
Let me run the gamut over;
Let me fight and love and laugh,
And when I'm beneath the clover,
Let this be my epitaph:—
"Here lies one who took his chances
In the busy world of men.
Battled luck and circumstances,
Fought and fell and fought again.
Won sometimes but did no crowing
Lost sometimes, but did not wail.
Took his beating, kept on going,
Never let his courage fail.
He was fallible and human,
Therefore loved and understood
Both his fellow men and women,
Whether good or not so good,
Kept his spirits undiminished;
Never false to any friend;
Played the game until it finished:
Lived a sportsman to the end."

Chamber Plans Celebration For Completed Sewer

The new $350,000 sewage system of Campbell will be completed June 23. The local chamber of commerce is giving serious consideration to celebrating the completeion of the project.

Tentative plans as outlined for the occasion are: A parade starting from the downtown business district to the high school auditorium for a dedication ceremony.

This will be preluded by a concert of popular music presented by the Northern California Music project of twenty-seven musicians directed by James Thompson, Jr. It is also planned to have several specialty numbers during the concert. The concert will be followed by the official transfer of the project to the Campbell Sanitary district board.

Immediately following the presentation the orchestra will present a concert program. Other plans under discussion by the chamber are a street dance for the younger people.

Definite and complete plans will be decided by the chamber at its meeting Monday, June 17.

The sewage system proper has been completed for the past seven weeks and the service is now being used by the public. The final details, such as resurfacing the roads and other minor details, is all that remains to be done.

The completion of this project is the culmination of 17 years of endeavor to furnish this community of 5500 persons with modern sanitation.

A little over a year ago a group of public minded citizens presented their problem to the W. P. A. in San Jose. They were advised what steps to take to meet requirements and with this accomplished, had a survey made and the cost determined.

There was the problem of raising the necessary funds to pay the sponsors share of the $350,000, amounting to $95,000. Finally the plan was submitted to the voters and was carried by a 3 to 1 vote.

Chamber to Meet Monday, June 17

President J. M. Dahl postponed the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce which had been set for last Monday, to Monday, June 17, at the Waltrip restaurant.

The change was made to allow the police commitee more time in which to study the situation.

This will be the last meeting before the summer recess, unless the chamber votes some other arrangement.

Rudolph Clay of Mountain View and Primo Cabato of Eden avenue were each fined $10 by Justice of the Peace Blaine Monday for an accident that occurred June 3 at Winchester and Moorpark. Caboto's fine was for failure to stop and render assistance when Clay's truck overturned as he swerved to avoid hitting Cabato's car. Charging the latter failed to heed the stop sign, Clay followed Cabato and attacked him so his fine was for battery.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings (Olivia Valencia), Thursday, June 6, a nine pound boy, who has been named Randel Lee.

Largest Copper Smelter
The largest copper smelter in the world is at Anaconda, Mont.

At the same time a board was elected. On April 24, 1939, the project was officially started with Clyde Kennedy of Los Gatos selected as consulting engineer.

Robert W. Mead, district manager of district 9, stated, "I am well pleased with the entire setup, one outstanding feature of this project was the very favorable units cost."

Charles E. Prentiss, project director of Santa Clara county, said "It is one of the finest sewage systems I have ever had the pleasure to supervise. I wish to thank the Campbell Sanitary District Board and Clyde Kennedy for their cooperation in overcoming many difficult problems which came up during the course of construction."

CANDIDATE

M. G. DEL MUTOLO

When last elected, my campaign was on a platform of economy in government, curtailment of waste, and reduction in taxes. My record will bear out the fact that I strenuously opposed many unnecessary appropriations with the end in view of lightening the burden on the shoulders of those who were least able to pay. I fought to shift part of that burden on those who, through loopholes in our tax laws, were not contributing their just proportion for the support of our state government.

During the entire general and special sessions of the legislature, the plight of the farmer, home owner, small independent businessman and wage earner, held my undivided attention and I constantly tried to find a solution for their problems. The aged, infirm, youth and those unable to find employment demanded my constant consideration and received it.

I am again a candidate for the office of Assemblyman for the 31st District on the same platform. I will do my utmost to accomplish the fulfilment of my pledges.

World This Week

nations are now working toward cheaper means of extracting U-235, the recently discovered element which possesses five millions times the power-output of coal. Success in that venture may ultimately lessen the need of countries, poor in coal and oil resources, to wage wars, diplomatic or military, for those power supplies elsewhere. The world has long lived under an economy of scarcity—one reason why nations have fought for their share of the world's limited resources. If synthetic research proves such resources unlimited, and makes them easily available to all, one cause of war will be removed.

Peace and Labor

Peace on earth, though scarce, is by no means extinct. The embattled field of labor's civil war has become the scene of a highly significant peace move, with the march of the orphaned International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, 250,000 strong, back to the fold of the A. F. L. Significant the action is, but hopeful, no. For the comment of John L. Lewis was: "A. F. L.-C. I. O. peace negotiations would be a futile waste of time!"

First Air Battles

Airplanes were first used in war by the Italians in the Tripoli campaign of 1911.

On Monday, June 10, Mrs. F. A. Jacobson, president of the Campbell Union High School P.-T. A. and Mrs. Worthin Grattan, president of the Campbell Union Grammar School P.-T. A. attended a dessert luncheon at the home of Mrs. E. E. Cox of Saratoga. They were accompanied by Mrs. Anthony Jurras, Mrs. C. E. Williams and Mrs. E. A. Fahler. The occasion was an executive board meeting of El Paradiso council of P.-T. A.

Herbert Johnson visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. Oliver E. Johnson on Harrison avenue last week. Young Johnson who has been attending the Glad Tidings Bible institute in San Francisco will be one of the speakers at the commencement exercises of the institute on June 22, and will be one of four young men who will make a speaking tour through California, Oregon and Idaho this summer, visiting churches of Assembly of God.
